

This book documents scientifically how human beings and everything evolved from mere divisions of nothing. Citing evidence from nearly a thousand cross-disciplinary references, shocking insights into the human nature, the mind, consciousness, communality, love, sexual relationships, humor, happiness, will power, and the individualized purpose of everything are deduced. This incredible source of factual information and revealing deductions on the deeper reality of all things can provide useful knowledge to anyone willing to learn.

Kuenftigen Leuten, or “future people” in English, are deduced to be the authors of the book because the scientific facts indicate that their conscious will for the individualized self-fulfillment of all humanity propelled the writing of these insightful volumes. They hopefully will soon lead to the replacement of the pathologically hierarchical cultures of today with an empathetic commonness of purpose based on the individual diversity involved in natural human equality. Ending the battle between the sexes is a vital component of that process, and means for doing so on both a small and large scale are revealed in these pages via a coherent merging of opposites, just as existed for millions of years of human prehistory before there was ever any thought of a superior being. We may all be “future people” if we want to be.
